

Marilù Capparelli

Professional experience

Marilù Capparelli has been Google's Director of Legal Affairs since 2009. Marilù Capparelli heads Google's legal department and leads a team of lawyers operating in several European countries. Before Google, Marilù Capparelli obtained a PhD in civil law from the University of Bologna where she held the role of adjunct professor, worked as a jurist at the EU Court of Justice, was Director of Legal and Public Policy Affairs at eBay, PayPal and Skype and, in previous years, she worked for important international law firms in Italy, Brussels, London and Washington DC where she dealt with media law and policies and new technologies, corporate and commercial law, M&A, antitrust and international litigation. He is fluent in English, French and Spanish and has a basic knowledge of German.

Academic activity

Marilù Capparelli lectures on media law and new technologies in various academic courses and masters. She is a lecturer in the Law of Internet Technology master at Bocconi University and she is a Faculty Professor at Istud Business School. In 2018, Marilù Capparelli was chosen among the leaders of her sector to give a lecture at the famous Harvard University. She is author of various academic papers and articles and co-author of the book "Intelligenza artificiale Il diritto, i diritti, l' etica" published by Giuffrè.

Awards and acknowledgments

Marilù Capparelli has obtained numerous important international awards and prizes including the prestigious Chambers CG influencers award for 2019, has been listed among the 30 best (female) lawyers in Italy and in 2019 has been nominated among the first Italian Inspiring Fifty (she has been ranked amongst the fifty most influential women in technology in Italy).

Offices and Qualifications

The offices held are as follows:

RCS Mediagroup S.p.A., Independent Director of the Board
Tod's S.p.A., Independent Director of the Board